First Annual New Mexico Railroad History Celebration at the Cultural Museum of Santa Fe

Santa Fe is a land born for celebrations, feasts and parties: commemorations, meetings, exhibitions and fairs are naturally part of the DNA of the city different "the city different" as it is known throughout the world.

Its major fairs (International Folk Art Market, Indian Market, Spanish Market) are added to the Wine & Chile Fiesta, the burning of Zozobra, the Feast of Santa Fe, the conventions, the more than 100 art galleries, the dozen museums of international level ... Santa Fe oozes Art and Culture: a society plunged into the permanent celebration of its roots, its history, the contemporary currents, the avant-garde, the tradition and the lineage of always being in movement, always at the head of the that happens inside and outside its contours.

Santa Fe is the oldest state capital of the current US territory. It was founded around 1600, although Native Americans already resided in the vicinity from much earlier.

Like all people ... the arrival of the train changed everything. Originally, the train reached Lamy, and from there, an arm was drawn to Santa Fe in 1880. Even so, this beautiful city has never been important in the rail nodes of the USA and that lack limited it to a second plane in the strategic projection region of. All in all, Santa Fe and New Mexico are proud of their railway history, the legacy of Fred Harvey and his legendary hotels, the current New Mexico Rail Runner Express and the Celebration of the 10 years of life of the fantastic Railyard.

The Cultural Museum of Santa Fe houses these days one of the venues of the First Annual New Mexico Railroad History Celebration with a sample of photos, objects, programs, lectures, art, trains to scale, model railroading, stands and meals that are part of the celebration .

Your capture of our event is "spot-on" and exactly what drove our team to plan, assemble, and conduct the month-long celebration. Sunday's arrival of four NM mayors brought more focus to our efforts and the railroad's contribution to NM growth and prosperity. We plan to make this celebration event an annual event to focus attention on New Mexico's railroad history. THANK YOU.
